

Remembering a charity in your will

At Talbots Law we always encourage our clients to remember a charity in their will. Our nominated charity is Birmingham Children's Hospital, and below you can read how you could help to write the story for tomorrow's children.

For over 150 years visionary people have been remembering the Birmingham Children's Hospital in their wills. Their gifts have gone on to help future generations of children, and have helped the hospital to become a national and international centre of excellence.

Mary Mocklow, Talbots Law CEO explains why Talbots are supporting the Charity: "Our employees have so many personal stories of friends and families that have been helped and supported by Birmingham Children's Hospital so that when we asked them to vote for their preferred cause to support, the decision was a comprehensive one. When I visited the hospital recently, I was humbled by the amazing care they provide every day of the week, every week of the year, and it just confirmed to me that we had made the right decision to give our whole-hearted support to them."

All Talbots staff are engaged in raising funds through a host of different activities, and hope to raise close to £40,000 during 2018.

Ian Bond, Director & Head of Trusts & Estates adds: "Every year, the hospital receives legacy gifts, of all sizes, from people just like you and me, who have chosen to invest in the future of the hospital. We might not know what the future holds for any of us yet, but we do know that this kind of support will do so much for sick children and help the hospital to provide more innovative treatments, more positive experiences and, most importantly, more hope for generations of children to come."

Legacies will help to build a future where better treatments are more readily available for life-threatening childhood illnesses, where state-of-the-art equipment is always to hand, and where pioneering research continues to push the boundaries of paediatric medicine to help save more young lives.
